

Executive Summary

An incredible opportunity presented itself to me when I was hired to work at The Leela Palace in Bengaluru. When it comes to the financial industry, there is a great deal to study and comprehend. And I'm confident that I've made effective use of the time allowed to me by putting out my best effort and complete dedication to the assignment assigned to me by my boss. It is my hope that the knowledge and experience I have received would serve as a springboard for my future career endeavors.

A complete account of the history of the Leela Palace, as well as the services that are being reintroduced to the public, will be provided through this effort. In order to gather information for the project, a SWOT analysis was performed, which highlighted the company's strengths and opportunities for growth, as well as the company's weaknesses and threats, which they encountered along the path to reaching their goal. Participation in a variety of CSR programmes that help the community is encouraged by the company, which also has a clearly defined organizational structure. All of the employees are really friendly and helpful at all times, whether they are providing new information or instructing new users on how to utilize their system.

As a starting point, the primary objective of this study is to evaluate the financial performance of the LEELA PALACE. To accomplish this, I have chosen Ratio analysis as the technique of evaluation for the organization's financial statement. According to the technique, the most effective method for determining how a company is doing financially and whether or not they are using their debt and money in the most appropriate ways is to analyse financial data that has been collected over a period of time.
